

“When a society is flourishing, health tends to flourish”

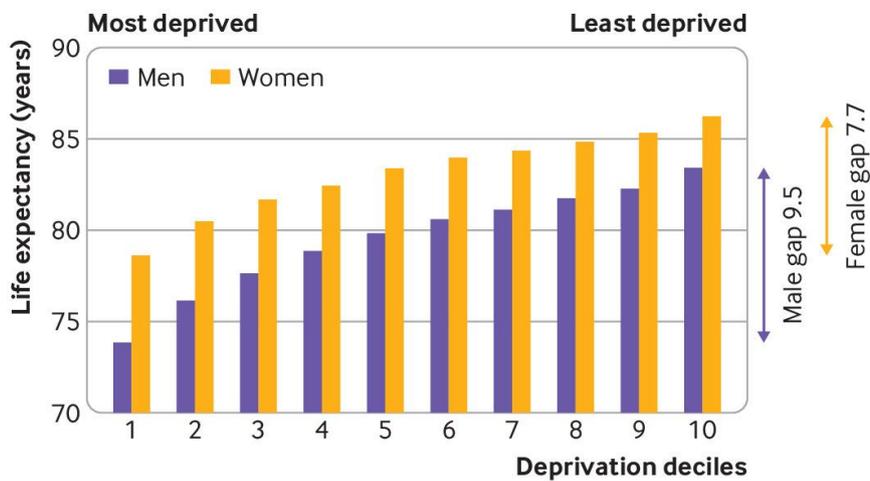

Graph 1

Public expenditure was cut from 42% of national income in 2009-10 to 35% in 2018-19...

Source ONS

Graph 2

Source BMJ 2020; 368 doi: <https://doi.org/10.1136/bmj.m693> (Published 25 February 2020)

When a society is flourishing, health tends to flourish. When a society has large social and economic inequalities, it also has large inequalities in health. WHO

Evidence, assembled globally, shows that health is a good measure of social and economic progress. If health has stopped improving, then society has stopped improving (Marmot)